Indianapolis Senior Community Receives Perfect Annual Survey from State Department of Health

INDIANAPOLIS, IN (March 5, 2025) – Fairway Village, an American Senior Communities location, has received a deficiency-free annual state inspection from the Indiana State Department of Health.

Each year, senior care communities undergo inspections through unannounced visits from the Indiana State Department of Health. During these visits, assessments are made on the cleanliness of the facility, compliance with state and federal regulations, safety measures taken to protect residents and staff, dietary practices to ensure quality meals, review of recordkeeping practices, staff-to-resident ratio, and the overall quality of care being provided. These meticulous evaluations include interviews with residents, their family members, and staff.

A deficiency-free rating is the highest score a senior care community can earn and is achieved by only a small percentage of senior care homes each year.

American Senior Communities CEO, Steve Van Camp said, “Achieving this rating is no small feat. This team works hard every day to maintain excellence in healthcare standards, as well as embracing our core values. Fairway Village staff remain highly focused on strong teamwork, personal attention, and compassionate care, as well as maintaining open communication with care teams and family members. It is all part of their strong dedication to going beyond the required benchmarks. We congratulate them on this latest recognition.”
